

Mayor Christina Whiteman Calls City Council Meeting to Order

by Kathleen Gallagher

May is a month for celebrations and congratulations and the May 26 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council was not short on either. Five scheduled presentations were held early in the meeting.

If I Were Mayor . . .

First to be recognized—in fact, seated at the dais in Mayor Emmett Jordan's usual spot when the meeting began—was Greenbelt resident Christina Whiteman, who was one of five semi-finalists from Prince George's County in the Maryland Municipal League's (MML) If I Were Mayor contest. A fourth-grader in Alice LaRusso's class at the Robert Goddard French Immersion School, Christina was one of nearly 2,000 students who entered the contest this year.

Each year, fourth-graders learn about municipal government and are invited to participate in an essay contest in which they describe how they would handle a particular problem if they were the top elected official in their city or town. Each essay begins, "If I were Mayor, I would . . ."

This year MML focused on civility and respect, requiring the students to describe how, if they were mayor, they would persuade everyone to be civil and work together after a decision was made to build a playground in a location where public opinion had been divided on whether a playground or a skate park was the better choice.

After gaveling the meeting to order, with a little assistance from the other mayor, and leading the Pledge of Allegiance, Christina read her essay, in which she said that as mayor she would propose including some obstacles in the playground that could be used by skateboarders at designated times, thereby including everyone's interests. In time-honored government tradition, she would appoint a committee to represent all interests in developing a fair schedule for use of the playground at different times.

ERHS Debate Team

Next to be recognized was the Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) Debate Team. In only its third season of competition, the team triumphed over more than 600 teams to win the national debating championship title at the National Liberty Bell Classic Debate Tournament hosted in February by the University of

by Sandra A. Lange

Several hundred people attended the Grand Reopening of the newly-refurbished Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday night, May 29. The event not only commemorated the reopening of the theater after months of construction but also mirrored the feature film shown at the original opening of the theater on September 21, 1938. Shirley Temple in Little Miss Broadway never looked cuter -- or showed off her curly hair and dimpled smile more grandly -- than on the 40-foot CinemaScope screen in Greenbelt's historic theater. The new Dolby digital 5.1 sound system carried her sweet voice straight into our hearts.

Greenbelters of all ages attended the grand reopening. Two pioneers who had been at the original 1938 showing. Barbara Bonham Young and Joanne Slaughter Kellaher proudly took their seats, remembering their childhoods in 1938. Young, age 7 at the time, remembers being very excited; Kellaher, at age 3 or 4, knows she was there but doesn't remember much about the evening.

Hilary Howes with Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) was busy gathering stories from those who stopped by to share their memories of the Greenbelt Theater. One couple remi-

Two Hearings, Wine Permit, Bus Shelter Acted on by City Council

by Kathleen Gallagher

Following the recognitions and proclamations reported on in a separate article, the Greenbelt City Council's at its May 23 regular meeting dealt with a number of business items and at a discussion of bus stops not on the agenda. A request to approve the serving of wine at the theater grand opening reception generated some controversy. The council held two public hearings required by law at which no one requested to speak.

Budget Public Hearing

The city charter requires a public hearing on the proposed city budget for the next fiscal year between the council's last budget work session and the June 8 meeting at which council will to adopt the budget. Bill Orleans attempted to make use of the time by asking the council and the city manager questions about the budget, but for the most part he was told by the mayor and other councilmembers that a public hearing is intended to be a time for the city to hear comments from city residents, not to be a question-and-answer session or a debate. Nonetheless, he succeeded in asking City Manager Michael McLaughlin about a particular bus stop in Greenbelt East where the bus shelter, which was installed many years ago, is not completely handicapped accessible. Mayor Emmett Jordan directed Orleans to raise questions under the Petitions and Request agenda item.

Constant Yield Tax

The second public hearing was held to meet state requirements concerning a constant yield tax

Greenbelt Day Fun, Games Will Last All Weekend

by Sara Alpay

Greenbelt Day Weekend celebrates Greenbelt's 78th anniversary Saturday, June 6 and Sunday, June 7. There are many fun and free activities but highlights include the annual Roosevelt Ride, a vintage-themed bike ride through central Greenbelt, Artful Afternoon's theater and craft activities and live music with the Greenbelt Concert Band. Beginning Saturday morning, Greenbelt dog lovers can attend a pet expo block party from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Greenbelt Dog Park on Hanover Parkway. Mayor Emmett Jordan's Commemorative Address to celebrate the 78th anniversary of Greenbelt happens at 3 p.m. and is followed by the Greenbelt Concert Band under the direction of Tom Cherrix.

Gather Sunday at 11 a.m. for the Roosevelt Ride festivities which include bike decorating before the ride and a picnic and lawn games following. Artful Afternoon begins at 1 p.m. with a firefly craft workshop led by Artist in Residence Gina Mai Denn as well as a tree painting activity which benefits the City's arts scholarship program. At 3 p.m. Happenstance Theater, a vaudeville-style clown theater, entertains with Mark Jester and Sabrina Mandell. A studio open house, a pottery sale, art and history exhibits round out the Artful Afternoon which is a monthly program of the Greenbelt Recreation Department. The Greenbelt Museum's new exhibit is "The Knowing Hands that Carve This Stone: The New Deal Art of Lenore Thomas Straus." This exhibit showcases the artist who carved Greenbelt's iconic Mother and Child statue.

For more local history, tour the Greenbelt Museum's historic house at 10-B Crescent Road, across the street from the Community Center. Tours are available between 1 and 5 p.m. for a nominal fee.

For more information about City of Greenbelt arts programs, visit greenbeltmd.gov/arts or call 240-542-2057. Arts programs are sponsored in part by the Maryland State Arts Council.

Editorial
Kudos to the New Management

We are delighted to see the Greenbelt movie house reopened and wish its new operator, Friends of the Greenbelt Theatre (FOGT) success in this innovative new undertaking by a citizen-based non-profit organization. This past weekend’s grand opening signaled a good start. The continuing success of the Greenbelt Arts Center and New Deal Café gives us confidence that this new citizens’ group will succeed as well.

We do not expect that to happen easily, however. All theater operations face challenges as modern technology makes movie watching possible almost anywhere. This theater is competing with newer theaters offering reclining chairs and seat-side food services. To succeed financially, show first-rate movies and serve the community while still preserving the historic character of the theater will be a great challenge for FOGT, and we expect there will be bumps along the way. We wish FOGT well and a long successful association with Greenbelt.

As new ideas are instituted and changes made, we ask FOGT to make one in the name of historic preservation and correct spelling. We ask that the name of the movie house be restored to its original name – Greenbelt Theater. The present name, Old Greenbelt Theatre, was created by the previous operator. We’ve renovated the theater and changed management. Let’s restore the theater’s name as well.

Lower City Voting Age

People who turn 16 are deemed capable to drive--an activity in which they are trusted to be responsible for the lives of others, so why do we not entitle them to vote? Voting is how they will get into politics and civic duty, and by allowing them to vote in local elections, we will encourage them to become participants in the civic circle. I am 14 years old and I want the City of Greenbelt to lower the voting age for city elections to 16, 16 and 17 year olds deserve the right to vote. They can pay taxes, hold a job, drive, but cannot have a say in how their tax dollars are spent or how the city they live in is run. In school, students are learning (or have learned) how the government works, but because they are disenfranchised, they are not fully participating in their city.

Fairvote.org is an organization that works on voting rights issues. It lists many studies which suggest that voter turnout increases when the voting age is lowered to 16. The city of Takoma Park, Md., recently lowered its voting age to 16, and in the first city election, the city found that 16 and 17 year olds voted at twice the rate as people ages 18 and older. By lowering the voting age for city elections, Takoma

Park increased its civic engagement.

Lowering the voting age in Greenbelt will urge city council members to be more serious about younger people. This could lead to a broader focus on topics that matter to young people: quality education and job opportunities. Politicians will make better decisions when they listen to more of their citizens.

Allowing the right to vote at a younger age encourages students to get in the political process. Students can also have more of a say in their community. The more voices are heard, the greater our community can be. These are

On Screen

Tracking the Madding Crowd

Opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, June 5 is Far from the Madding Crowd, a hard-driving tale of a young Victorian girl in England pursued by three suitors: a lone sheep farmer, a mustachioed Redcoat sergeant and a prosperous bachelor on the shy side. Striving to find her way in demanding times and often lush landscapes is Bathsheba Everdene (Carey Mulligan). The eponymous novel by Thomas Hardy once drew readers by the numbers; in the film, David Nicholls weighs in expeditiously on the script while Thomas Vinterberg directs with elan.

Pennsylvania. This year’s proposition for the two-person debates was “Economic Globalization Benefits Worldwide Poverty Reduction.”

Varsity debaters Vinai Rachakonda and Donovan Harvey, both juniors who look forward to returning next year, won four out of six preliminary tournaments. This qualified them for the elimination rounds, where they won all six debates on behalf of the approximately 20 students who participate on the Roosevelt team.

Rachakonda and Harvey were congratulated by council, together with the team’s vice president, Shawn Abraham, faculty sponsor Jennifer Matson and parent debate coach Dr. Darrell Harvey. Dr. Harvey commented, “They’re phenomenal kids and it’s a pleasure to be involved with them.”

Basketball

Congratulations were then in order for the ERHS Boys Basketball Team, represented by six team members and their coach, Brendan O’Connell. O’Connell explained that the team had won the Prince George’s County championship but then lost in the regional playoffs.

Council was pleased to hear that the team members in attendance were not only all Greenbelt residents, but also sophomores and juniors who would return next year, including Trent Bishop, Delascio Dancy, Ryan King, Naji Marshall, Derek Moore and Victor Okafor.

The ERHS Girls Basketball Team and its coach, Delton Fuller, who won both their county and regional 4A championships this year, were invited to the meeting but unable to attend.

Peace Month

On behalf of the Prince George’s Peace and Justice Coalition, Alexander Barnes, Sr. accepted a proclamation from the city council designating June as Peace Month in Greenbelt. During June, the coalition works with other Greenbelt groups to organize and conduct programs and activities promoting peace and nonviolence. Barnes said this year they were especially looking forward to the dedication of what has become known as the Peacemakers’ Memorial, an area of benches and memorial trees placed near the Youth Center in memory of now-deceased residents Esther Webb, Bert Donn, Bob Auerbach and Doug Love, all of whom worked for many years with the coalition on peace and justice endeavors.

A schedule of events, which will be updated as additional information is received, can be reached by clicking on Peace Month Schedule on the city’s homepage at greenbeltmd.gov. Although the dedication of the memorial was originally scheduled for Sunday, June 28, Councilmember Judith Davis asked at the meeting that an effort be made to reschedule it since most members of council will be out of town for the MML annual conference at that time. It has subsequently been rescheduled for Saturday, June 27 at 4 p.m.

Small Cities Month

Since June is also Small Cities Month, the mayor read a proclamation to that effect and presented it to Councilmember Silke Pope who, along with Councilmember Edward Putens, represents Greenbelt on the Small Cities Council of the National League of Cities (NLC). Putens is a past president and Pope is currently vice president of the Small Cities Council. As defined by NLC, small cities are those of less than 50,000 population, which comprise the great majority of municipalities throughout the United States.

Greenbelt Peace Month Overview of Activities

The Greenbelt City Council at its session last week officially proclaimed June as Greenbelt Peace Month. The city had already invited local groups to organize events promoting peace and related values. Several activities planned for this upcoming first weekend of June recognize Peace Month in varied ways.

Peace encompasses harmony with the natural world. On Saturday, June 6, a Greenbelt Forest Preserve clean-up will be held starting at 1 p.m. at Area A, Northway and/or Area D, by the Gladys Spellman Pedestrian Overpass. The clean-up is organized by the Forest Preserve Advisory Board and the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) to celebrate the Greenbelt Forest Preserve. Contact Valerie Elliott, valandmabel@gmail.com, 301-441-4508 or 301-504-8207.

Peace connects nations and peoples. Two Peace Month events are also part of the city’s anniversary Greenbelt Day Weekend. A Greenbelt Concert Band performance featuring a special work in tribute to peace will start on Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Community Center. For information, contact Sean Davis, sdavis5@gmail.com.

On Sunday, June 7, a naturalization ceremony for new citizenship candidates will be performed by the U.S. Citizen and Immigration Service, beginning at noon in the Community Center. Contact USCIS at 800-375-5283.

Peace involves outreach and service to those in need. On Sunday, June 7, the Greenbelt Baha’i Community will sponsor a Bikes for the World collection of used bicycles to be sent to developing countries. It will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Municipal Building parking lot, 25 Crescent Road. Contact Jim Fischer, fischer2@verizon.net.

Sunday also brings a presentation by the Rev. Dr. Eugenia Osho-Williams about ways to bring peace to addicted individuals, their families and our communities. Starting around 12:30 p.m., it will be hosted by Good Samaritan Lutheran Church, 10110 Greenbelt Road, in its Fellowship Hall during a potluck lunch following the morning worship service. Contact Pastor Gloria Cline-Smythe, mygoodsam@comcast.net.

Learning about others fosters peace. Two lectures are currently planned. On Tuesday, June 16 at 7 p.m., Mark Miller will speak about Illegality of War: the Kellogg-Briand Pact, at the Greenbelt Community Center.

On Thursday, June 25 at 7 p.m. at the Community Center, Maryland State Delegate Alonzo T. Washington will talk on issues of color and class. Contact the Prince George’s County Peace & Justice Coalition, justpeacepg@earthlink.net, or Bill Orleans, 202-256-8678.

The final Peace Month event will occur on Saturday, June 27 at 4:00 p.m. near the Youth Center parking lot, where three benches and four trees will be dedicated to the memories of four deceased residents.

Newsreel Contrasts

A compelling newsreel, on the devastating damage in New England caused by a hurricane in 1938, opened the movie show at the grand reopening of the newly renovated Greenbelt Theater last Friday. Coincidentally this hurricane hit on the very day the Greenbelt Theater originally opened. The newsreel showed some of the 100,000 Works Progress Administration (WPA) workers cleaning up the damage. During the Great Depression, the government was employing many construction workers to build useful things, including our town of Greenbelt. Back then, there was a belief that the government can do useful things.

In sharp contrast, now we are in an ongoing mini-depression for the 99 percent (those with yearly incomes under $300,000). The 1 percent are doing very well now and the Great Recession for the business economy ended a few years back. Instead of a mini-WPA, much needed now by the 99 percent, we have sequestration, which is good for the 1 percent. Absurd! The smaller supply of jobs works against middle-class people getting salary raises.

Newsreels always preceded movies when I was growing up. I suggest that the Greenbelt Theater enhance future shows with old newsreels on events with historic importance, even if this requires reducing the barrage of coming-attraction clips.

Dog Killed at Shelter

On January 26, 2015, Betty Edwards petitioned council to investigate the circumstances that led to the killing of her dog, Paris, while Paris was in the custody of the Greenbelt Animal Shelter.

We were working with Prince George's County government officials to get information about Paris when Edwards finally received, after a three-month wait, a response on April 28 from Michael McLaughlin, Greenbelt city manager. According to McLaughlin, his response is based on information provided to him by Celia Craze, director of Planning and Community Development. Craze oversees the city's animal control operations, which includes the Animal Shelter.

According to McLaughlin, Paris was killed following three instances when the dog, without provocation, attacked and bit a person. We still lack detailed information about any of these incidents, which occurred after Paris was surrendered to Animal Control, that would justify killing Paris. According to Edwards, she was told of one bite to a person and that the victim was bitten while breaking up a fight between Paris and his dog. It is not unusual for dogs to fight and, due to the potential for serious injury, trainers recommend ways to prevent being bitten when breaking up a fight. According to Edwards, Paris did not get along with other dogs, which could make Paris challenging to handle in a shelter setting.

According to a bite record and conversations with the Prince

George's County Animal Management Division, Paris allegedly bit Celia Craze and her dog at the shelter on October 10, 2014 and was killed the next day.

We could not corroborate a third incident of an attack and bite to a person or that the two known bites were the result of Paris attacking a person. Why was Paris killed? And why has McLaughlin not been more forthcoming with information?

Prince George's County Flood Insurance Study

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) flood maps for Prince George's County have been updated, and as a result some buildings may for the first time be included in a high-risk flood zone called a Special Flood Hazard Area (SFHA). Affected property owners in the SFHA may be required to purchase flood insurance. On June 10, Flood Risk Open House will be held at 1801 McCormick Drive, Room 140, Largo, from 6 to 8 p.m.

At the open house, residents can find their property on preliminary flood maps and learn of flood risk. FEMA staff will be available to talk to property owners about the map updates and what it means. Attendees will also learn about flood insurance options from insurance specialists.

For more information on the countywide Flood Insurance Study and mapping, visit the Department of the Environment's Sustainable Initiatives Division at princegeorgescountymd.gov/sites/Sustainable/Documents/FloodRiskOpenHouse_InfoSheet.pdf.

Botanic Garden Talk Features Rock Creek

On Friday, June 12 from noon to 1 p.m., the U.S. Botanic Garden will present a free lecture, A Year in Rock Creek Park, by Melanie Choukas-Bradley, author, naturalist and teacher.

This talk about the natural history of Rock Creek Park, one of the oldest and largest urban national parks in the country, is based upon the newly published book, A Year in Rock Creek Park - the Wild, Wooded Heart of Washington DC, by Choukas-Bradley, with photographs by Susan Austin Roth. The presentation takes a journey through the seasons in the park, with a focus on the native plants of its woodlands. The author has traveled the 33-mile length of the creek, on foot and cross-country skis, by bicycle and by canoe, and she will describe her adventures. The talk will be illustrated by Roth's evocative photographs, many of which appear in the book. Celebrate the 125 anniversary of Rock Creek Park, which was created in 1890, the same year Yosemite was established. Note that pre-registration is required; visit usb.gov.

nised about their first date there. Kathy Labukas remembers being taken by her teenage cousin to the theater when she was 5 or 6 years old to see the Giant Taran-tula movie that starred one of her television heroes, Leo G. Carroll. She was terrified that Carroll, whom she idolized in the TV se-ries Topper, was being terrorized by the monstrous spider.

Other activities going on in Roosevelt Center included mak-ing a toy called a thaumatrope, said to be popular in the 19th century. Children attached a circle with a picture on each side to two pieces of string. When the strings were twirled quickly between the fingers the two pic-tures appeared to blend into one due to the persistence of vision. This exemplified early animation and cinematography.

Shirley Temple drinks com-plete with cherries, and popcorn and candy were being hawked by various people threading their way through the crowd outside. Some were wearing large trays around their necks, typical of 1940s cigarette girls.

The theater seats 380 patrons. Invited guests and members were able to enter the theater at 7 p.m., and by 7:30, a long line of patrons filled the plaza outside for the remaining seats. A num-ber of people were turned away, disappointed that they had arrived too late to gain entry at the 50 cent price for adults and 25 cents for children -- the original 1938 prices.

The welcome program began at 8 p.m. with various dignitaries being thanked for their help in providing funds for the renova-tion. In particular, the Maryland state delegates, represented by Senator Paul Pinsky and Del-egates Tawanna Gaines, Anne Healey and Alonzo Washington, as well as former Delegate Justin Ross, were recognized for ob-taining $300,000 in state funds. County Councilman Todd Turner and former Councilwoman Ingrid Turner obtained $100,000. The Maryland Heritage Area Author-ity, through the Maryland Historic Trust, provided $80,000. Part-ners in Preservation by American Express and the National Trust for Historic Preservation raised $75,000. The City of Greenbelt also earmarked funds for the project; the exact amount is not known at this time because cost figures are still coming in, ac-cording to city manager Michael McLaughlin. Total project costs are estimated to exceed $1 mil-lion.

In his remarks, McLaughlin recognized city staff who played a huge role in completing the renovations. Celia Craze, Plan-ning and Community Devel-opment director, managed the planning and contracting process. Jim Sterling, Public Works act-ing director, oversaw construc-tion. Four members of the Pub-lic Works crew -- Karl Skaggs, Brian Abbott, Anthony Childress and Curtis Dudley -- were recog-nized for their roles in painting the walls and ceiling, as well as other construction tasks.

The official welcome over, the entertainment began with a period newsreel of a hurricane that hit the East Coast in Septem-ber 1938. Hurricanes were not named then; we saw devastation and clean-up accompanied by dramatic music. This was fol-lowed by a Donald Duck cartoon, silly and thoroughly enjoyed by the children in attendance. Then came Shirley Temple in all her adorable outfits and cute little beanie hats.

All in all, the grand reopening was declared a great suc-cess by attendees. Old Green-belt Theatre Executive Director Caitlin McGrath, looking chic in her black and white 1940s-style dress, smiled broadly as she accepted accolades and hugs. Mayor Emmett Jordan and other members of the city council who were present -- Judith Davis, Ed Putens, Silke Pope, Konrad Herling and Rodney Roberts -- likewise were pleased with the program. Jordan cited physical improvements that make the the-ater accessible to persons with disabilities. As the hoopla ended, the real work of operating a the-ater that attracts patrons and be-comes a financial success began.

rate. When real property assessments have gone up, it is possible for a city to collect more taxes than it did the prior year without increasing its tax rate. In order that this phenomenon is not allowed to slip past the tax payers without warning, the state requires that public notice be given and a hearing held so everyone will understand that unless the city lowers its tax rate, it will gain more revenue. This year the city is not planning to increase its tax rate, but it has given notice that it also does not plan to lower the tax rate in order to keep the yield from taxes constant. Doing so would require lowering the tax rate and cutting the budget by nearly $600,000.

Bus Stop

Orleans raised the bus stop question again during Petitions and Requests, seeking confirmation that, The Greenbelt East bus stop was to be included in the budget this year for upgrading. Councilmember Rodney Roberts thought if an issue had been raised about the accessibility of a particular shelter by a person who needed it, the city should look at it. McLaughlin responded that this stop was included in a comprehensive bus stop accessibility study by city planning staff that will come to council over the summer. He said nothing had ever been said about work on this particular shelter this year.

Councilmember Edward Putens

agreed with Roberts and Orleans that pulling out that one bus shelter for action might not be a bad idea since attention had been focused on it. McLaughlin held to the position that cherry-picking individual items off the list was not recommended and that the entire picture should be looked at when the report was available. He was supported by Jordan and Councilmember Judith Davis, both of whom maintained that the purpose of the study was to give council and staff an overview of the entire situation so that needs could be reviewed in an orderly fashion and then be prioritized. Davis also pointed out that the study was not only to look at shelters but also the sidewalks and other connections to see the whole picture of individual bus stops.

City Code

The council unanimously adopted a resolution to contract with Municipal Code Corporation, which is the city’s existing contractors for maintaining the City Code, a compilation of all city ordinances still in effect to undertake a recodification of the code, a task last accomplished in 1984. Recodifying the code essentially means reviewing it and subsequent ordinance enactments carefully. It involves such tasks as reformatting; updating language and terminology; reviewing for inconsistencies, conflicts, duplications and anachronisms; and ascertaining continued compliance of the city code with state and federal laws. The entire process will take about 15 months and is budgeted for up to $13,530.

Wine at the Theater

Feelings ran warm regarding a request from theater operator Caitlyn McGrath of the Friends of the Greenbelt Theatre to serve sparkling wine at the reception to be held as part of the theater grand reopening. As part of the theater’s operating agreement, any requests to serve alcoholic beverages at the theater requires council approval. Roberts vehemently maintained that the city should keep its strict policy on permitting no alcoholic beverages in city-owned facilities. He saw no reason why the theater could not hold its reception in the New Deal Café or Beijing. He asked why it had to be in the theater. Judith Davis said she saw a difference between serving alcohol for a short time at an event and selling alcohol. The theater’s request was approved 5-1.

Vendor List

Council introduced for first reading a resolution to revise the list of vendors for which the firm of Randstad which provides temporary employees was added to the list payment is expected to exceed $10,000 during this fiscal year because of staff vacancies in the Recreation and the Planning and Community Development Departments.

Auditors

The city council also voted unanimously to continue employing the firm of Cohn Reznick for the Fiscal Year 2015 audit. The firm did its first annual audit for the city last year. It was noted that the proposal was increased by about eight percent over the prior year.

Museum Hosts New Exhibit

On June 6, the Greenbelt Museum opens a new exhibition, The Knowing Hands that Carve this Stone: The New Deal Art of Lenore Thomas Straus, which focuses on sculptor Lenore Thomas Straus (1909-1988). The artist was a young woman in the late 1930s, when she carved several landmark works in Greenbelt for the Resettlement Administration (RA), a New Deal agency tasked with resettling people from failing farmland as well as from crowded, unhealthy, urban areas. She created large scale public art in Greenbelt which includes the iconic Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center, the commercial heart of the experimental green town, and a series of limestone bas relief friezes depicting the Preamble to the U.S. Constitution on the front of the Center School, which is now the Greenbelt Community Center. In addition, she carved pieces for other New Deal-era housing projects, as well, including Langston Terrace in Washington, D.C., and the Jersey Homesteads in New Jersey.

The exhibit explores her early life, the New Deal era work she completed, her connections to Accokeek, Maryland, and her later life and the ongoing influence of work. Much of her sculpture, including the mother and child statue, was completed at her home and studio in Accokeek, where she and her husband Robert Straus lived for several decades. It was there that they became friends with Alice and Henry Ferguson, wealthy Washingtonians who purchased Hard Bargain Farm in the early 1920s as a vacation retreat. Both the Strauses and the Fergusons, as well as other residents in Accokeek, worked to preserve the wooded lots in the area of the farm, now known as the Moyaone Reserve. Residents there still work toward responsible environmental stewardship and maintaining a rural environment. The legacy of citizen activism is akin to that of citizens in Greenbelt, an idea the museum plans to explore through exhibition programming and a partnership with the Alice Ferguson Foundation, which operates Hard Bargain Farm, is a non-profit dedicated to promoting the environmental sustainability of the Potomac River watershed.

“Although Thomas Straus was an accomplished artist who has influenced a great many others who have come after her,” says Megan Searing Young, director of the Greenbelt Museum and curator of the upcoming exhibition, “she has not yet been studied extensively. This exhibition and its accompanying programming will identify and promote her work, provide new insights into her life and connections with both Greenbelt and Accokeek, and offer an opportunity for those interested in local history, WPA and New Deal art, and women artists to learn more about her and the New Deal era in which she thrived.”

The exhibit will include photographs of the artist and her work, documents from the Resettlement Administration, examples of her sculpture and much more. Interactive children’s elements will include a dress up station where children can don overalls and goggles, just as the artist did.

A preview of the exhibition is planned for Friday, June 5, at 7:30 p.m.

This exhibition is made possible through the gracious support of the Maryland Heritage Areas Authority, the City of Greenbelt, Prince George’s County Council Member –Todd M. Turner (District 4), and the estate of Sue Hoya Sellars.

City Strives for Zero Waste At 2015 Events and Beyond

by Erin Josephitis and Susan Barnett

Zero waste station with compost, recycle and landfill bins clearly labeled.

On December 31, Greenbelt rang in 2015 with a New Year’s Eve party at Greenbelt Arts Center, highlighting a zero waste effort led by the Butterfly Brigade. This event, which used reusable plates, cups and napkins as well as recycling and composting, resulted in just one grocery-sized bag of trash going to the landfill from over 100 party-goers.

The idea of zero waste had more than just a short-lived resolution for 2015. The idea was transformed into greater reality when Susan Barnett, member of the Butterfly Brigade and Greenbelt’s Green Team, initiated a Zero Waste subcommittee of the city’s Green Team. In this framework, she volunteered to lead a much larger zero waste effort at the 11th Annual Greenbelt Green Man Festival. In partnership with other groups and individuals, the Green Team championed the effort.

Zero waste is defined as an “ethical, economical, efficient and visionary philosophy to guide people in changing their lifestyles and practices to emulate sustainable natural cycles, where all discarded materials ... become resources for others to use,” according to the Zero Waste International Alliance, 2004.

Zero waste is a step toward sustainability and a process whereby resources are re-used, energy is conserved, pollution reduced and costs are ultimately reduced. Other cities have already adopted zero waste goals, including Austin, Tex., San Francisco, Calif., and New York, N.Y. Greenbelt – are we ready?

Festival Waste

The aim of Greenbelt’s most recent zero waste effort was to reduce, reuse, recycle or compost waste of the Green Man Festival instead of sending it to the landfill. In order to reach this goal, festival participants were encouraged to bring reusables, including water bottles and eating ware.

At least 74 people checked in with the Zero Waste crew to tell them they had brought their own water bottles and cold water stations were set up so that water bottles could be refilled. Reusable serving ware was made available as well for those who had forgotten theirs and vendors and merchants were encouraged to use compostable serving ware.

In addition, the Green Team / Green ACES zero waste volunteers shared their intent with festival guests, demonstrated how to sort waste effectively and, when necessary, they sorted the compostable and recyclable materials into appropriate waste bins.

Zero Waste Stations

Zero waste stations were created – each included a recycling bin, a compost bin and a landfill/trash bin. At the end of each day at these stations, landfill trash bins were nearly empty and the compost and recycling bins were overflowing. Where not paired with recycling and compost bins, the landfill bins were filled not just with landfill waste but also with recyclables and compostable materials.

The results left us with a few important lessons: First, pairing landfill bins with recycling and composting options means that less waste ends up in the landfill and more resources are reclaimed. Second, increased accessibility to water fountains throughout Greenbelt could allow citizens to refill their water bottles more often, reducing the need to purchase or discard plastic bottles. Most importantly, caring citizens, given the opportunity, make the sustainable choice and sort waste effectively.

Volunteer Support

The zero waste event was well supported by a wide variety of volunteers. Prior to the festival, students from the Pathway School created signs that brought attention to the zero waste stations. Several Greenbelt citizens, including Lore Rosenthal and John Klinovsky, volunteered to help sort waste and to assist participants. Among the most outgoing zero waste volunteers at the festival were students from the Eleanor Roosevelt High School National Honor Society (NHS). The NHS students brought attention to the effort by carrying zero waste signs and by eagerly “dumpster diving” into the trash bins to sort waste into the appropriate bins.

Thanks to city public works employee, Jay Jefferson, for volunteering to keep a tally of the bags of recyclables and compostable materials during the festival. Throughout the two days, Jefferson counted a total of five bags of recyclables and 10 bags of compostable materials.

Another thanks goes to the New Deal Café, Sunrise Catering and Miguel’s Crepes At The Market for collectively harvesting 91 pounds of food scraps. These were collected by the Greenbelt Compost Co-op and distributed to gardens throughout Greenbelt. Another thanks goes to MOM’s of College Park for accepting 93 pounds of compostable materials to their BiobiN. Materials collected in the BiobiN were then added to the Prince George’s County Compost Pilot Program.

Finally, the City of Greenbelt Public Works and a generous citizen volunteer lent their trucks to help transport compostables.

Efforts Continue

Most notably, the zero waste efforts did not stop as the Green Man Festival came to a close. During the following week, Lore Rosenthal and Beth Leamond, both of Greenbelt Compost Co-op, collected an additional 51 pounds of food scraps from the New Deal Café. The following weekend they collected 85 pounds of compostable eating ware and 85 pounds of food scraps at the Crazy Quilt Festival wedding of Hillary Gottemoeller and Joe Harris. Due to these efforts, 379 pounds of food scraps and compostable materials were diverted from the landfill to enrich the soil.

Thanks to all the local businesses and volunteers who made this effort possible from the start of this year to the Green Man Festival and beyond. With the efforts of these dedicated volunteers, zero waste became more than just an idea; here in Greenbelt, it is a reality.

As awareness grows of Zero Waste, more events are keen to participate.... the latest, following on the success of Green Man and Crazy Quilt, is the Grand Re-opening of Greenbelt’s Movie Theater. Executive Director Caitlin McGrath thoughtfully planned for the grand re-opening on May 29 by ordering compostable cups, plates, popcorn bags and napkins for patrons to use. She also invited the Zero Waste Circle, with the help of the Butterfly Brigade, to help organize Zero Waste for the festivities! It was a huge success and with 35 pounds of compostables being taken to MOMs instead of the landfill! All this is good for the Earth and good for Greenbelt!
